AMERICA STANDS SOLID ON TERMS OF JAP MEASURE

American Reply to Japan's
Note Friendly But Firm
On Issue

CLEARLY MANDATORY
Congress Within Its Rights
To Exclude Immigrants
From U. S.

(By the Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, June 18.—The American reply to the Japanese protest against the exclusion provision of the immigration act was made public here tonight by the state department simultaneously with its publication through the foreign office in Tokyo. It is cordial and friendly in tone, but at the same time makes it clear that the exclusion provision in no way trespasses upon any written or implied obligation on the part of the United States.

Secretary Hughes points out that congress was wholly within its right in the enactment of the provision and that the action taken "is mandatory upon the executive branch of the government and allows no latitude for the exercise of executive discretion as to the carrying out of the legislative will expressed in the statute."

The construction generally placed upon the American note is that it conclusively demonstrates the view of the Washington government that the exclusion law is a closed incident and that no attempt to modify or alter its terms is to be expected.

Secretary Hughes in the note which he prepared with utmost care, expresses pleasure over the "friendliness and candor" over the protest communication delivered to him by Ambassador Hanihara May 31.

"You may be assured of the readiness of this government to consider in the same spirit the views you have set forth," Mr. Hughes adds.

The note then analyzes the exclusion applicable to all aliens ineligible for citizenship as it is modified by the exceptions contained in the act and points out: "It will be observed that, taking the exception into account, the provision in question does not differ greatly in its practical operation, or in the policy which it reflects, from the understanding embodied in the gentlemen's agreement under which the Japanese government has cooperated with the government of the United States in preventing the emigration of Japanese laborers to this country."

Appreciation of this cooperation in carrying out a "long established policy" is expressed and the communication adds: "Indeed the appropriateness of that policy, which has not evidenced any lack of esteem for the Japanese people, their character and achievements, has been confirmed, rather than questioned by the voluntary action of your government in aiding its execution."

The substantial difference being the exclusions and the gentlemen's agreement, the note continues, lies in what President Coolidge described in his statement at the time he signed the immigration bill, as the determination of congress to exercise "its prerogative in defining by legislation the control of immigration instead of leaving it to international arrangements."

"It is not understood that this prerogative is called in question, but rather, your government expressly recognizes that it lies within the inherent sovereign power of each state to limit and control immigration to its own domains an authority which it is believed that the Japanese government has not failed to exercise in its own discretion with respect to the admission of aliens and the conditions and location of their settlement within its borders," Secretary, after noting that the "President" would have preferred to continue the existing arrangement with Japan with such modification as seemed desirable, asserts: "This government does not feel that it is limited to such an international arrangement or that by virtue of the existing understanding (the gentlemen's agreement) or the negotiations it has conducted in the past with the Japanese government, it has in any sense lost or impaired the full liberty of action which it would otherwise have in this matter. On the contrary, that freedom with respect to the control of immigration," which is an essential element of sovereignty and entirely compatible with the friendly sentiments which animate our international relations, this government in the course of these negotiations this government always fully reserved."

The note then quotes the clauses from Article II of the commercial treaty of 1894 with Japan which

Why Men Leave Home!

The maddest man in town was discovered yesterday. Ranting and raving and wholly unmindful of the stares of pedestrians, he strode destructively along Main street with his fury.

Shy townspeople gave him room as he blindly staggered along in the business thoroughfare while storekeepers deserted customers to peer inquiringly through their doors at the spectacle of fury.

More inquisitive ones, who followed curiously after his blind march down Main street, heard the English language butchered and cast aside for more common uses of infamy to better match the heated coals of wrath.

Then a bold friend halted his march and grew courage to inquire of his rage.

"My wife bobbed her hair Monday," he growled.

A mutual note of sympathy arose from the ranks of curious males.

One Man Wounded When Miners Hit Battle Cry Again

The battle which began at midnight terminated shortly after dawn.

The Brady mine was reopened recently on a non-union basis after union miners refused to return to work under the schedule of 1917.

TAX REFUND AMOUNT IS CUT BY CONTINUED DRAIN

Almost half of Pontotoc county's refund quota from the state illegally collected on taxes of 1920, remains in the coffers of the county treasury, it was announced today.

A check on the refund warrants issued showed that $9,186.59 remains in the treasury awaiting for county taxpayers out of the total of $20,976.62 allotted Pontotoc county by the state for the payment of refund for illegally collected taxes.

County Treasurer J. W. Westbrook announced that taxpayers were slow in demanding their refund amount and especially in cases where tax amounts for the fiscal year had not been paid by county property owners. Those entitled to tax refund generally claim their return fees when paying fiscal year taxes.

Treasurer Westbrook is anxious to dispose of the entire refund amount in order that the books of his office may be cleared of the matter.

SALT LAKE MAN DISCOVERS NATURAL GAS WELL IN YARD

(By the Associated Press)
SALT LAKE CITY, June 19.—The much heralded high price of light gas and fuel means absolutely nothing to Henry Nebeker of Salt Lake City, for he has a natural gas well in the rear yard of his home. Drilling to a depth of 535 feet, Nebeker encountered enough gas to take care of all his home needs and he has a 30-gallon water tank for storage purposes.

Nebeker has estimated that the flow from his well is about 24 times what he can possibly use, but as yet he has made no attempt to supply other residents of his neighborhood.

M'ALISTER ENDS STATE FIGHT ON GOVERNOR'S JOB

Election Board Secretary Puts Argument About Vacancy
To Rout

EXPLAINS ACTION
Filings Often Made For Persons
Filing Unexpired
Terms in Office

(By the Associated Press)
OKLAHOMA CITY, June 19.—There is no possibility of a gubernatorial election in Oklahoma in November and the tentative filing by Governor M. E. Trapp for the governor's office was the usual procedure in the case of persons holding certain offices during the unexpired term of their predecessors, according to an informal statement today by W. C. McAllister, secretary to the state election board.

Mr. McAllister said that just at the close of the filing period attempts are often made by persons to file for offices which are being filled by men serving another's unexpired term. In the past such attempts have resulted in persons who make such filing appearing on the ticket the man holding office having failed to file through the belief that he was to serve out the full term of his predecessor regardless of an intervening election. Such conditions could arise, Mr. McAllister explained, only in those offices which the law does not state definitely must be filled at the next election. This definite provision is made for the supreme court and corporation commission.

To guard against such contingencies the election board for several years has accepted tentative filings of all persons holding offices of the kind, the filings being held not to be official unless some other candidate enter. This, Mr. McAllister said, was merely to insure fairness and to prevent confusion being created.

Mr. McAllister said such a tentative unofficial filing was in the hands of the election board of Governor M. E. Trapp as well as some other persons who are filing for unexpired terms but none of them were entered as official filings because no effort was made by any

VETERAN FLIER ESCAPES FROM BURNING PLANE

(By the Associated Press)
DAYTON, O., June 19.—Lieut. James A. MacReady, country flier, last night escaped death by making a parachute jump from his plane when it burst into flames at an altitude of 1,500 feet near here.

After the plane hit the earth the crash brought hundreds of people to the scene but all were helpless. The heat was so intense that it kept all at a distance and they were unable to try to rescue the pilot whom they believed to be imprisoned in the flames.

As the fire smoldered away, permitting a search of the wreckage for the body of the pilot, Lieut. MacReady pushed through the crowd and said he had landed safely about a quarter of mile away floating to an easy landing.

The veteran flier did not appear to be shaken by his experience.

Guthrey Coming to Talk Good Roads To Meeting Here

Wild Game Their Cue

Thirty members of the Pontotoc County Isak Walton League have pledged observance of the state game laws, according to announcements from the local league.

Members of the local league are now state game wardens and pledged to uphold clean sport for lovers of the great outdoors and its wild animal life.

Ada Isak Walton league members alias game wardens will endeavor to protect the wild game of the county from ruthless extermination by unscrupulous hunters and nim-rods. They are pledged to prevent the dynamiting and seining of streams for fish and for the shooting of wild game only in season.

An effort is being made by the local club to increase the membership in Ada and in Pontotoc county. Especial stress will be made in the drive for membership in the county, since farmers are in a position to better apprehend willful violators of the state game law. The campaign for membership is in charge of Sherwood Hill, who will accept membership petitions in the county.

FATE OF BOND ISSUE REMAINS UNCERTAIN

(By the Associated Press)
CHANDLER, June 19.—The fate of the $990,000 road bond issue voted on in Lincoln county Tuesday still was uncertain this afternoon. Definite figures have not been compiled.

The crowds at both the afternoon and evening hours were the greatest ever assembled at an Ada chautauqua. Four thousand, estimated, were present Wednesday evening.

Mr. Bailey's lecture consisted of a plea for patriotism, clean living and high ideals. Justice and service must be the ideals of the average citizen.

CHLORINE GAS IS LOOSED TO OUST UNRULY SOLONS

Prolonged Rhode Island Session of Legislature
Is Gassed

SENATORS OVERCOME

Gassed Senators Flayed by Lieutenant Governor on Convening

(By the Associated Press)
PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 19.—Chlorine gas was let loose in the senate chamber early today after the body had been in session since Tuesday at 12:05 p. m. The fumes were so strong that it was impossible to sit in the room and the factions that have prevented adjournment agreed to an hour's recess in order to clear the gas from the chamber.

Three Republican senators and one Democrat were overcome by the gas and treated by physicians.

The gas was in a newspaper discovered behind the rostrum.

Gov. Flynn who appeared in the chamber shortly after the discovery of the soaked newspaper declared that an attempt had apparently been made to suffocate Lieut. Gov. Toupin who showed the effect of the fumes as he left the chamber.

When the fumes became apparent senators and spectators became groggy. Soon Senators Sherman, Anderson, and Sharpe, Republicans, and Powers, Democrat, sank into a coma and were carried out.

An hour and a half after the gas was discovered physicians announced that the four stricken members of the body were not in their seats.

Lieut. Gov. Toupin, pale and unsteady mounted the rostrum at the end of the recess and announced that the senate would proceed with business, but the four stricken members of the body were not in their seats.

Gov. Flynn declared that he was "going to the bottom of this and find out who did it."

A filibuster was started by the Democrats on the first day of the session, January 1. The Democrats have before the senate a resolution question of calling a convention to revise the state constitution. The Republicans are striving to secure passage of the annual appropriation bills but the Democrats under their leader, Lieut. Gov. Toupin refuse to let the bill come up for a vote until the majority Republicans agree to vote upon the constitutional convention resolution.

The Republicans agree to vote upon but refuse to pass the constitutional convention measure. The Democrats have offered to vote for an emergency appropriation bill but the Republicans claim it would not relieve the needs of state employees many whom have not been paid for months. The Lieutenant governor has kept up the filibuster by refusing to recognize motions offered by Republicans.

Drastic Action Called.

When the senate re-convened the Lieutenant governor noticed the absence of the three Republicans who were overcome by the gas and ordered deputy sheriffs to bring them into the senate chamber. The deputies reported that they were unable to do so. The Lieutenant governor then deputized 15 civilians to compel the attendance of the Republicans. He ordered them to break down the doors of the committee room where the stricken senators were. A squad of 15 Providence police were prepared to resist such violence.

Dr. Herbert T. Harris sent to the Lieutenant governor a certificate that he had examined 19 senators and found them physically unfit to return to the chamber at once because of gas poisoning.

The Lieutenant governor made a speech in which he ridiculed the Republicans, saying that he had stood in the midst of the gas throughout the period and that he had been examined by a physician who stated that he was all right.

Contrasting the statement of Dr. Harris with that of another physician whom he did not name, the Lieutenant governor said the latter had examined senators Sherman, Sharpe and Sanderson and pronounced them fit.

Senator Greene of Newport then moved that the senate recess and then began a discussion of his motion flaying the Republican party. Senators Sherman, Sharpe, Sanderson and Cole were taken to a hospital at 11:25 today.

Senator Sherman was carried from the committee room on a stretcher, his face badly drawn as he was taken down to the ambulance. The other three senators were able to go to the ambulance assisted by their colleagues.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

HE THAT WILL LOVE LIFE, AND SEE GOOD DAYS, LET HIM REFRAIN HIS TONGUE FROM EVIL, AND HIS LIPS THAT THEY SPEAK NO GUILT.—Peter 3:10.

A returned traveler writing in the New York Times relates how Russia has returned to the old soviet order after partly abandoning the worst communistic features of the program for two or three years. He says that Lenin left a will directing such a return to his first program as soon as the nation was given a breathing spell under the relaxation he granted and that this is now being put into effect. As a result deportations to Siberia and other places of exile are numerous and trade and industry which began to revive when the bars against individual enterprises were partly let down, are again just about wrecked. Russia still hates the rest of the world most heartily but at the same time seeks to be recognized.

The third party convention St. Paul is having rough sailing due to the presence of the communists who are attempting to gain control of the new party but who are vigorously opposed by the farmer and union labor elements. The prospects for a strong party being developed from the meeting are not very bright but a meeting of La Follette progressives has been called for July 4. At this convention something decisive may be worked out and perhaps the scrapping son of Wisconsin launched as a nominee for the presidency.

In many cases it happens that parents in their old age are dependent on their children, generally making their home with some son or daughter. In many instances this is not a congenial arrangement for any of those concerned, but we often wonder if the lot of such old people would not be easier if their children stopped to remember that before many years they will be in the same position.

While we know little about farming, it appears that Bermuda grass makes about the best pasture of any grass yet discovered in this section. Whether it is better than sweet clover is a disputed question, but it furnishes a world of grazing. Bermuda pastures have been known to keep a cow to the acre and a few hogs in addition. We should like to see more pasture land and dairy cows.

In former times towns and cities sprang up largely by chance or because of some unusual condition or advantage. In these days they are built through the pluck and enterprise of the citizens. A place with a bunch of boosters of sound judgment will grow into a city of importance while one with better opportunities but lacking the boosters will remain just a wide place in the road.

Only one weevil has been reported to the News thus far. If the depredations of this little pest can be kept down this year, Pontotoc county farmers ought to begin beating back. They have been hard hit, but they are of the nature that never quits and will come back eventually. Farming like all other industries has been hard hit by the depression, but a better day is ahead. Oklahoma farmers are the men who dare and do.

About the most appealing editorial we read when a boy was a tribute to blackberry pie. The praiser of this delicious kitchen delicacy was so profuse in his praise that he wanted a bill passed making it a penitentiary offense for any member of the genus homo to cut a berry pie in less than three pieces. You know from that day to this blackberry pie has been good. We hope it remains that way.

And now the senatorial candidates are trying to arrange for a series of debates in which all five of the Democratic aspirants will participate. Some fur will fly if these gents appear on the same platform and express their opinion of one another face to face.

The hot winds are beginning to damage the corn a bit in places, it is said, though no great damage has been done to date. We look for nature to come to our rescue within a few days, and a good corn crop result.

Much of the land in this county has washed away. The failure to terrace and run the rows accordingly has done its work. But possibly it is best after all. A dairy country has money, and these worn out fields will grow sweet clover and keep fat and prolific milch cows.

With the proceeds of the sale of $400,000 of road bonds and an equal amount of federal and state aid, Hughes county will have $800,000 to spend on permanent roads. In another year travel in that county will be easy.

Gen. Dawes, Republican nominee for vice-president, has declared war on the demagogues. He has undertaken a big job, one considerably larger than Samson or Hercules ever tackled in the heyday of their prowess.

DAWES—AS ARTISTS SEES VICE PRESIDENTIAL NOMINEE

JAPAN SUFFERS COSTLY ELECTION OF OFFICERS

(By the Associated Press)

TOKIO.—The most expensive election in Japan's parliamentary history was that held this month to choose 464 members of the house of representatives. Estimates of the total expenditure of the candidates and parties not including the necessary expenses of the government on election machinery, range between $17,000,000 and $22,000,000, with most of the estimates approaching the figure.

With more than 1,000 candidates in the field, it is estimated that each aspirant spent an average of $20,000. The contest for the Morioka seat, in which Korekiyo Takahashi, president of the Seiyukai party, defeated his Selyuhonto rival, Ichimin Tago, by a narrow margin of 49 votes, brought out the most lavish spending. Mr. Takahashi is believed to have spent nearly $150,000, while his defeated rival disposed of about $100,000.

In Tokio the largest amount was spent by the independent candidate Takagi, who got rid of $50,000 and won. The average for each candidate in Tokio is placed at $25,000. That money counted for a great deal shown by the case of a candidate named Mori. He had only $10,000 to spend and received only 90 votes to his successful rival's 3,000.

WAGNER CHARGES ANTI-GERMAN PROPAGANDA AGAINST BAYREUTH

(By the Associated Press)

BAYREUTH, Bavaria.—Siegfried Wagner, who has just returned from a tour of America to raise money for the perpetuation of the Wagnerian festivals at Bayreuth, has delivered a lecture here in which he expressed satisfaction with his American trip. He said the amount of money he obtained for the festival will make the revival of the summer opera season possible, but will not suffice for long.

Wagner made the statement that the French propaganda in the United States against Germany and the Germans hindered his work. But there was also anti-Bayreuth propaganda, which charged that he was only soliciting money for his own purse. But above all the Washington flag incident was the worst blow he had to face in his American tour.

Wagner expressed much satisfaction with the artistic success of his American visit, and was enthusiastic about the hospitable treatment accorded to him and his wife by Americans.

BRITISH OLYMPIC RIFLE TEAM HANDICAPPED BY SERVICE ARM

LONDON.—Four ex-service marksmen have been selected to represent Great Britain in the individual rifle competition at the Olympic Games June 27. The team members selected after trial shootings at Bisley, are Captain E. H. Robison, late of the Royal Air Force; Lieut. A. E. Martin, late of the Royal Army Service Corps; Sergeant A. E. Fliton, late of the Queen's Westminster; and H. Douglas, late of the 6th Notte and Derby Regiment. All four have frequently won important rifle-shooting competitions.

The British riflemen feel that they will be handicapped at the Olympics by the wide range of arms and ammunition open to use by competitors, since all rifle shooting in this country has been regarded

EPISCOPAL CHURCH MEN TO MEET IN WELLESLEY

WELLESLEY, Mass., June 17.—The 20th anniversary of the Episcopal Conference for Church Workers, as well as the tenth anniversary of the Summer School for Church Music, will be celebrated at Wellesley College June 23-July 3.

At each gathering many of the outstanding leaders of the Episcopal Communion, including representatives from the various mission fields, will conduct round table discussions on church methods and problems. These annual gatherings are to religious workers somewhat in the nature of the Williams College conference on politics. Fifty-four dioceses and missionary districts of the church are represented among the 472 registered members of the conference who come, not only from continental United States, but from the West Indies, Panama, China, Japan and Philippine Islands, and are representative of all schools of thought in the church.

Southwest States Expected to Send Hordes to School

(By the Associated Press)

STILLWATER, Okla., June 19.—One hundred-fifty students from all of the states of the southwest are expected to attend the annual cotton school, which will begin at the Oklahoma A. and M. college July 1 and continue through the month.

One hundred are expected at the creamerymen's short course also in July. Practical dairying problems are to be studied as well as the manufacture of dairy products. Two thousand Oklahoma farmers and members of boys and girls agriculture and home economics clubs are expected to attend the annual farm congress the last of August. The congress will close summer events in preparation for the start of the fall term. Registration for the next school year, is scheduled to be September 1, 5, 8, and 8. Classes will meet September 9, it has been announced.

The president of the summer school, in remarking about the unusual registration at the summer school, points out that with the exception of the war years there has been a rapid growth in attendance at summer sessions, but the growth this year is unusually large.

Boys and Girls Grow To Better Purpose in Summer

(By the Associated Press)

NEW YORK, June 19.—Young children between the ages of four and 13, both girls and boys, grow faster and better during August and the three following months than at any other period of the year, according to the results of a careful study into the question of child nutrition made by the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor. Boys make 55.3 percent and girls 59.8 percent of the total yearly growth between August 1 and Dec. 1. The period of maximum gain being in the late summer and early fall, the period of minimum advancement falls in the late spring and early summer.

While the same tendency holds for both boys and girls, it is most marked among the latter. The following tables give the average gain in pounds by months and the percentage of the annual gain made in each of the months of the year.

*In May the girls showed an average loss of .05 pounds. This is equivalent to 0.8 per cent of the total gain.

The report on this investigation reads in part as follows: "The rate of growth in both height and weight over a given period of time is quite as important in judging a child's state of development, as his attained stature and weight at any given period. Physicians, teachers, school nurses and nutrition workers must rely on the gains made during short periods of from three to six months to determine whether the child is doing well, for obviously, all healthy children must be expected to gain steadily in both height and weight. The usual procedure has been to assume that the difference between the average height and weight of the children of one age group and the average height and weight of children of the next age group indicates the rate of gain which all children within the given age period may be expected to make. To determine the expected gain for any portion of the year, say for one month, the procedure is to take one-twelfth of the annual expected gain to determine the monthly expected gain. At best this method is very imperfect, for it leaves out of consideration retardation and acceleration, which largely determine the rate of gain."

To reach its conclusion the association made records of the successive weights of 1,000 children. This study is one of a series being carried on with funds given by the association for the purpose of providing the basis of more effective public health and relief work by filling in the gaps in existing basic information. Whether climatic conditions effect this seasonal variation in growth is soon to be determined.

Bungalow With Colonial Touch Gaining Widespread Popularity

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

The colonial touch in the building of bungalows is gaining widespread popularity. This is due in a large measure to the combination of the dignity of the home of the colonial type with the convenience of having all of the rooms on one floor.

Much of the charm of this home is in its quiet dignity and the careful attention paid to the simple lines of the trim and the correct proportions. The porch, with its simple pillars, forms an attractive portal which is balanced well by the wide window group in the bedroom to the right. Even the brick of the porch foundation and the fireplace, with their distinctive mortar setting of white, seem to fit in the general scheme of this "little white house" and contribute to its charm.

A rather unusual feature of the plan is the reception hall at the side of the house. This permits entering the home and retiring without disturbing the occupants of the living room. Notice that provision is made here for a stairway at the attic floor, where an additional bedroom might be installed after the house is built.

The living room of the home is of an adequate size and is properly proportioned and gives due consideration to wall space for the arrangement of furniture.

The attractive oblong shape of the dining room is one which seldom is found in a room used for this purpose. It is particularly well adapted to the oblong type of dining table which is so popular with housekeepers. The adjoining kitchen has been planned for the maximum of convenience and attractiveness.

The bedroom group has a conventional arrangement with several features which are of more than ordinary worth. Note that the bathroom, between the two bedrooms, is insulated from them by the closets. The sleeping porch is a feature which is unusual in a home of the bungalow type.

The outside dimensions of the house are 28' by 38 feet, well fitted to the lot of average size.

Faulty Building Often Cause of Lack of Heat

The human body has the most perfect heating system that has ever been devised.

This human heating system requires a sufficient amount of air; the right kind of fuel and proper attention.

The human body requires a good covering or protection, or its heating system may not be able to give the best results.

With those who are always cold, the fault lies with either the wrong kind of food (fuel), insufficient amount of air, or faulty circulation of blood (heating system), or their bodies may not be sufficiently well covered.

Those who have not sufficient protection or covering may not be sufficiently well covered.

Those who have not sufficient protection or covering can be likened to a faultily constructed building.

They have not been sufficiently insulated to keep out the cold, and consequently the heating system, the heart, veins, lungs, etc., may have to work overtime to supply sufficient heat.

So it is with a faultily constructed building. The heating plant, if it is working properly, will have to be forced constantly with every radiator continuously hot to supply sufficient heat comfortably to warm the building.

Under such circumstances, the fault can hardly lie with the heating plant.

An excess amount of fuel is required to supply the overworked heating plant. Constant care must be given to the boiler, as well as high-grade fuel supplied, to procure adequate results.

And under such conditions, the heating plant, which is not at fault, is many times condemned.

So every builder should first carefully consider the construction of his building.

Interior Lumber

The interior finish or mill work for the home must be given close consideration. In the end considerable money can be saved through the use of high-grade mill work, which, properly seasoned, will not warp, destroy the enamel and interior decorations which are the least expensive.

One's choice of lumber is today confined to birch, oak, gum and mahogany. Birch is an ideal lumber for interior finish. It takes both stain and enamel well and is hard and tough; the same can be said of oak. Gum, if properly handled, is also good lumber, but its great fault lies in its being soft and liable to warp and twist if not properly understood.

Paint Good for Cement

Do not neglect to paint cement walls and floors. This is necessary to prevent deterioration and dusting and makes such surfaces easy to clean. Special paints in ample color variety are made for this purpose.

Canes for London Ladies

LONDON.—Many of London's leisured women have adopted walking canes. These are not of the slender "feminine" variety, but men's canes of rather clumsy looking lengths of ash or cherry.

Muscle Shoals Project Dates For 100 Years

SHEFFIELD, Ala., June 19.—While the development of Muscle Shoals is but a recent project in the minds of most people of the United States, the history of intent to develop this vast potential power dates back a century, according to records under observation here.

The first act of Congress with reference to the Shoals was passed when congress gave its consent to the operation of an act passed by the Alabama legislature on December 3, 1823, to improve navigation in the Coosa river, in the center of the state, and to aid in connecting it with the Tennessee river in the north.

The company formed under these acts by congress and the legislature was unable to sell its stock and on May 23, 1828, congress passed another act ceding 200,000 acres of land in north Alabama to the state so the shoals could be improved.

An amendment to this latter act passed June 23, 1836, permitted the state to sell this land for less than $1.50 per acre, which was the minimum price then allowed by federal statutes. It is said some of the land sold for as low as 25 cents an acre.

The total cost of navigation facilities to 1890 was $2,101,726.50 and up to 1915 for operation and care was $1,406,372.30, making a total of $4,598,098.80 on Muscle Shoals for navigation alone.

In 1899 congress gave its assent for the first time for the construction of a dam and power station.

EPISCOPAL SOCIAL WORKERS WILL CONFER IN TORONTO

International flavor will be given the occasion by the fact that the social workers of the Church of England in Canada will participate in the Episcopal conference, which will be followed by the National Conference of Social Work, also meeting in Toronto, thus enabling delegates to participate at will in all three gatherings.

Was skeptical of Kellogg's Bran until it gave him back his health

Naturally Mr. Carter—whose letter follows—was skeptical. He had tried practically everything for the relief of constipation. All had failed. But Kellogg's Bran brought him permanent relief, just as it has done for thousands of others. Read his letter:

Gentlemen:
I am 43 years old, and have been for years a great sufferer from constipation. I had to resign a clerical position because of rushes of blood to my head, some of which caused me to fall to the ground. I took an outdoor laboring job and tried for the first time, skeptically I admit, your Krumbled Bran. The result has been wonderful. I began to be normal after I had been on the Bran about three days. No more enemas, no more Old Dr. So-and-So's Pills, Epsom salts by the ton, etc., ad infinitum! You have the most wonderful product for constipation I have ever seen or tried. Yours very gratefully,

L. T. Carter, 294 Nineteenth St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, does not irritate the intestines like drugs and pills. It acts exactly as nature acts. Eaten regularly, it is guaranteed to relieve permanently the most chronic case of constipation, or your grocer will return your money.

You will like the exclusive, nut-like flavor of Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled. Eat two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases with every meal. Eat it with milk or cream and in the recipes on every package. Sold by all grocers. Made in Battle Creek,

The Highgrader

By
WM. MacLEOD RAINE

Copyright by G. W. Dillingham Co.

Jack Kilmeny nodded with cool equality toward Farquhar and the captain, ignored Verinder, and smiled genially at India. For Moya his look had a special meaning. It charged her with the duty of faith in him. Somehow, too, it poured courage into her sinking heart.

"Afraid an engagement at Gunnison with Sheriff Gill won't let me stop for any poker tonight," he told his host.

Farquhar was on the spot to meet him in the same spirit. "Verinder will be glad of that. I fancy my pocket-book, too, will be fatter tomorrow morning."

Biggs appeared to take the newly arrived party in charge. As they started to follow him the prisoner came face to face with Joyce, who was just coming out of the house. Under the lowered lights of evening she seemed to swim in a tide of beauty rich and mellow. The young man caught his breath at the sheer pagan loveliness of her.

"What is it?" she asked in a low, sweet, tremulous voice.

His assurance fled. The bravado was sponged from his face instantly. He stared at her in silence from fascinated eyes until he moved forward at the spur of an insistent arm at his elbow.

India wondered how Lady Jim would dispose of the party. Jack Kilmeny might be a criminal, but he happened to be their cousin. It would hardly do to send him to the servants' quarters to eat. And where he ate the sheriff and his posse would likewise have to dine.

The young woman need not have concerned herself. Lady Farquhar knew enough of the West and its ways not to make a mistake. Such food as could be prepared at short notice was served in the dining room.

Having washed the dust of travel from himself, the sheriff returned to the porch to apologize once more for having made so much trouble.

Farquhar diverted him from his regrets by asking him how they had made the capture.

"I ain't claiming much credit for getting him," Gill admitted. "This here was the way of it. A kid had been lost from Landon's ranch—strayed away in the hills, y'understand. She was gone for forty-eight hours, and everybody in the district was on the hunt for her. Looked like they weren't going to get her. Soon it would be too late, even if they did find her. Besides, there are a heap of mountain lions up in that country. I tell you her folks were plumb worried."

Moya, listening to every word as she leaned forward, spoke vividly. "And Mr. Kilmeny found her."

The sheriff's surprised eyes turned to her. "That's right, ma'am. He did. I dunno how you guessed it, but you've rung the bell. He found her and brought her down to the ranch. It just happened we had dropped in there ten minutes before. So we gathered him in handy as the pocket in your shirt."

The sheriff retired to the dining room, whence came presently snatches of cheerful talk between the prisoner and his captors. In their company Jack Kilmeny was frankly a western frontiersman.

"You passed close to me Wednesday night at the fork of Rainbow above the J K ranch. I was lying on a ledge close to the trail. You discussed whether to try Deer creek or follow Rainbow to its headwaters," the miner said.

"That was sure one on us. Hadn't been for the kid, I don't reckon we ever would have took you," a deputy confessed.

SHALE OIL FUEL MAY SUPPLY JAPAN'S NAVY

TOKIO.—Japan's problem of oil supply, for years one of increasing anxiety, especially to the navy, will become substantially less acute if claims made on behalf of the South Manchuria Railway Company are proved.

For several years her railway has been conducting experiments in the production of oil from oil shales taken out in the ordinary course of the company's mining of coal at its Fushun mine, in South Manchuria. The experiments, it is claimed, have proved that this shale is of especially fine quality for oil production by dry-distillation process; that fuel oil can be produced by this method at cost which will permit competition with present market prices in Japan, and that if properly exploited the Fushun shales alone should yield 700,000 tons of oil annually, which is almost equal to the entire present consumption of the empire.

The addition of this amount to the present domestic oil production would make it unnecessary to import petroleum and its products. Japan now produces approximately 325,000 tons of crude oil a year,

"What beats me is why you weren't a hundred miles away in Routt county over in yore old stamping ground," another submitted.

"I had my reasons. I wasn't looking to be caught anyhow. Now you've got me you want to watch me close," the prisoner advised.

"We're watching you. Don't make any mistake about that and try any fool break," Gill answered, quite undisturbed.

"He's the coolest hand I ever heard," Farquhar said to the party on the porch. "If I were a highwayman I'd like to have him for a partner."

"He's not a highwayman, I tell you," corrected Moya.

"I hope he isn't, but I'm afraid he is," India confided in a whisper. "For whatever else he is, Jack Kilmeny is a man."

"Very much so," the captain nodded, between troubled puffs of his pipe. "And I'm going to stand by him," announced his sister with a determined toss of her pretty head.

Moya slipped an arm quickly around her waist. She was more grateful for this support than she could say. It meant that India at least had definitely accepted the American as a relative with the obligation that implied. Both girls waited for Ned Kilmeny to declare himself, for, after all, he was the head of the family.

The excitement of the girl he loved showed itself in the dusky eyes sparkling beneath the soft mass of blue-black hair, in the glow of underlying blood that swept into her cheeks. She hoped—oh, how she hoped!—that the officer would stand by his cousin.

In her heart she knew that if he did not—no matter how right his choice might be in principle—she never would like him so well again. He was a man who carried in his face and in his bearing the note of fineness, of personal distinction, but if he were to prove a formalist at heart, if he were going to stickle for an assurance of his kinsman's innocence before he came to the prisoner's aid, Moya would have no further use for him.

When the sheriff presently came out Captain Kilmeny asked him if he might have a word with the prisoner.

"Sure. Anything you want to say to him."

The English officer drew his cousin aside and with some embarrassment tendered him the use of his purse in the event it might be needed for the defense.

Jack looked at him steadily with hard unflinching eyes. "Why are you offering this, captain?"

"I don't quite take you,"

"I mean, what's your reason? Don't like it to get out that you have a cousin in the pen, is that it? Anxious to avoid a family scandal?" he asked, almost with a sneer.

The captain flushed, but before he could answer India flamed out. "You might have the decency to be ashamed of that, Jack Kilmeny."

Her cousin looked at the girl gravely, then back at her lean, clean-faced brother. "I am. Beg your pardon, captain. As for your offer, I would accept it if there were any need. But there isn't. The charges against me will fall flat."

"Deuced glad to hear it. Miss Dwight has just been telling us it would be all right."

India looked straight at Jack out of the steel-blue eyes that were so like his own. "I wasn't so sure of it myself, but Moya was Nothing could shake her. She's a good friend."

"I had it sized up about that way," the miner replied. "I'm much obliged to her."

The prisoner shook hands with both of his cousins, lifted a broad-brimmed gray felt hat from the rack, and delivered himself to the sheriff.

India gave a little exclamation and moved toward the hatrack. Her hand fell upon a second hat, similar India Picked Up the Hat and Turned It Round Slowly.

In appearance to the first, but much more worn and dust-stained. She opened her lips to speak and closed them without saying a word. For her eyes had met those of Moya and read there a warning.

The last faint beat of the retreating hoofs died away. An awkward constraint settled upon the party left at the Lodge. It was impossible to discuss the situation openly, yet it was embarrassing to ignore the subject in the thoughts of all. After a decent interval they began to drop away, one by one, from the group. India followed Moya, and found that young woman in her room.

"What are you hiding?" Miss Kilmeny asked quickly.

Moya produced from her hatbox a gray sombrero and put it on the table. "I didn't know it was you—thought it might be Lady Jim," she explained.

"Why wasn't I to tell Jack Kilmeny that he had taken Ned's hat by mistake?" India wanted to know.

"Because it wasn't by mistake. 'Not by mistake! What would he want with another man's hat?'"

"I'm not sure about that. Perhaps he didn't want his own."

"But why—why?"

"Don't they search prisoners before they lock them up?" Moya asked abruptly. Suppose there is something about that hat he didn't want them to see."

"How do you mean?" India picked up the hat and turned it round slowly. "It's worn and a bit disreputable, but he wouldn't care for that."

Moya found a pair of scissors in her work basket. With these she ripped off the outer ribbon. This told her nothing. Next she examined the inside. Under the sweat pad was a folded slip of paper. She waved it in excitement.

"What did I tell you?"

"But—if he is innocent—what could there be he wanted to hide?"

"I don't know. Do you think we ought to read this?"

"I don't know," India repeated in her turn. "Perhaps it may be a message to you."

Moya's face lighted. "Of course that's it. He wanted to tell us something when the rest were not there, so he used this method."

Three cramped lines were penciled on the torn fragment of paper.

"At wharf above camp."

"Twelve steps below big rock."

"In gunny sack three yards from shore."

Two pairs of puzzled eyes looked into each other.

"What can it mean?" India asked. "Can it be a direction for finding something?"

"That's what we must find out. 'At wharf above camp.' That probably means his fishing camp."

"What are you going to do, India?"

"I'm going to get Ned to help me find that gunny sack."

Moya found herself trembling. She did not know why. It was not doubt of her reckless friend, but none the less she was in a panic.

"Do you think we'd better?"

Miss Kilmeny looked at her in surprise. In general nobody came to decision more quickly than Moya.

"Of course. How else can we tell whether it is something he wants us to do for him?"

"When shall we look?"

"The sooner the better—tonight," answered the other girl immediately. "Lady Jim," Moya reminded her.

"She needn't know. She can't object if we take Ned and go fishing for an hour."

Moya consulted her watch. "Let's go now. We can be back in time for supper."

"Get into your fishing togs. I'll get Ned and we'll meet you on the west porch in a quarter of an hour."

Within the appointed time the three slipped away down the river bank trail as silently as conspirators. The captain was rather inclined to pool-pool the whole thing, but he was not at all sorry to share an adventure that brought him into a closer relationship with Moya Dwight.

"Must be this wharf," India said presently, as a bulky shadow loomed out of the darkness.

"Shouldn't wonder. Here's a big rock just below it. Didn't the paper say something about a rock?" asked the captain.

"Twelve steps below big rock, it says."

The soldier paced off the distance. "What now?"

"Three yards from the shore," called his sister. "There should be a gunny sack, whatever that is."

"Afraid he's spoofing us," Kilmeny said with a laugh as he moved out in his waders against the current. "Here I am. What's the next direction?"

India giggled. She was Irish enough to get the humorous side of things and could not help being frivolous even when she was greatly interested.

"Now you look over your left shoulder at the moon and wish."

Her brother's high voice cut in. "I say, my fool's kicking something. Wait a jiff."

He braced his feet, dived suddenly down with one arm till his face touched the water, and grappled with his fingers for a hold on something lying between two rocks at the bottom. Using both hands, he dragged his find to land.

"It's a sack," India cried excitedly. The captain's eyes met those of Moya. His face was grave, but she was white to the lips. Both of them felt sure of what they would find in the sack.

"Open it," she told him tensely.

With his pocketknife Kilmeny cut the string that tied the sack. He drew out a heavy valise so full that it gaped. Silver and gold coins, as well as bills, filled it to the mouth. They had found the money stolen from the treasurer of the Gunnison County Fair association.

All three of them were sick at heart. Jack Kilmeny then was guilty, after all. The message in the hat had been intended for them, but had been merely a note of identification of the spot. He had taken the captain's hat merely because he did not want the officers to find the directions under the sweat pad.

To Moya the next hour was a nightmare. They returned to the Lodge and slipped into the house by way of a French window opening upon the deserted north porch. Kilmeny hid the sack of treasure in his trunk and divested himself of his fishing clothes. Presently he joined Moya and his sister on the front porch, where shortly they were discovered by Verinder in search of a fourth at bridge.

India, knowing how greatly her friend was shaken, volunteered to fill the table and maneuvered Verinder back into the living room with her.

Captain Kilmeny, left alone with the girl of his dreams, wisely said nothing. He was himself indignant, his family pride stung to the quick. His cousin was not only a thief but a liar.

Born of a race of soldiers, with the traditions of family and of the army back of him for generations, the latter offense was the greater of the two. He understood something of how Miss Dwight felt. Openly she had championed his cause. Now her feelings were wounded, her pride hurt, and her anger ablaze. The fellow's offense against her had been flagrant.

So far the captain had guessed correctly. Moya writhed like a bruised woodland creature. Her friendship had been abused. She had been as credulous as a simple country wench, while he no doubt had been laughing up his sleeve at her all the time. No longer had she any doubt as to his guilt. To give herself in friendship impulsively was her temperament, though not many were judged worthy of such giving. This blue-eyed scamp had won her as no man ever had before. She had seen him through a glamour. Now his character stood stripped in its meanness. Her sweet trust was crushed. Against the advice of her friends she had been wayward and headstrong, so sure that she knew best.

Kilmeny, sitting beside her in the deep shadows cast by the wild cucumber vines, became aware that she was weeping silently. His heart bled for her.

"I say, don't," he pleaded. It was impossible for him to voice adequately his feelings. Greatly daring, he let an arm rest across the shoulders that were being racked by suppressed pianissimo sobs.

"You mustn't, you know. I can't stand it." And, again, "Please don't."

She gulped down the lump in her throat and turned upon him filmy eyes, the lashes of which were tangled with tears. The fine strong soldier represented the haven of rest toward which she was being driven. Had she never met his American cousin she knew that she would probably have accepted him in the end. The swift impulse swept her to anchor her craft for life in a safe harbor.

"Do you still . . . want me?" she asked lifelessly.

He could not on the instant take her meaning. Then, "Want you?" he cried in a low voice no words could have expressed fully. "Want you? Oh, my dear!"

"You know I don't love you . . . not in one way," she told him naively. "Lady Jim says that will come. I don't know. Perhaps you won't want to take the risk."

She could see the desire of her leap to his honest eyes. "By G—d, I'll take my chance," he cried.

"You'll give me all the time I want—not push me too hard?"

"You shall set your own time."

Her dusky head was leaning wearily against the back of a wicker porch chair. From sheer fatigue her eyes fluttered shut. Her lover would have given anything to wrap her in his arms and fight away her troubles. But he knew it would be months before he could win the right to do this.

"Would you mind if . . . if we didn't tell the others just yet?"

"It shall be as you say, Moya, dear."

She nodded languid thanks. "You're good. I . . . I think I'll go to bed. I'm so tired."

He kissed the tips of her fingers and she vanished round the corner of the house.

Kilmeny sat down again and looked for long across the moonlit river. His sweetheart had promised to marry him, but in how strange a fashion. He was to be her husband some day, but he was not yet her lover by a good deal. His imagination fitted another man to that role, and there rose before him the strong brown face of his cousin with its mocking eyes and devil-may-care smile.

CHAPTER VI

The Bad Penny Again.

Verinder strolled down to the river bank, where Joyce was fishing from the shore in a tentative fashion.

"Casting is a horrid bore. You should be a fisher of men," he told her fatuously.

"If I could be sure I wouldn't catch one. But if I happened to, what would I do with him?"

"Do with him! Why, it depends on whom you catch. If he's undersize unhook him gently and throw him back into the river. What?"

The gay smile, flashed sideways at him, was a challenge. "But it isn't always so easy to unhook them, I'm told."

"Not if one doesn't want to."

Joyce shot one swift glance at him and saw that he was on the verge of waxing sentimental. That would never do. It was on the cards that she might have to marry Verinder but she did not want him making love to her.

"Please don't take the trouble. It's really a matter of no moment."

The young woman made another cast.

"To you."

"I was thinking about me."

"You usually are, aren't you?" She looked up with surprised amusement. Resentment had made him bold. This was the first spark of spirit she had shaken out of him and she had made him the victim of many moods.

"But I don't blame you for thinking about the most interesting person you know. I think about you a lot myself. You're really ripping, you know."

Joyce groaned in spirit. He did that sort of thing as gracefully as a bear danced. To create a diversion she whipped back her line for a cast so that the flies snapped close to his ear.

"I say, be a bit careful," Verinder suggested.

"Oh, did I hook you?" she asked carelessly.

"I've been on your line for weeks."

"You'd better whisper it. Moya might hear," she advised roughly.

Verinder flushed. The transfer of his attentions was still a sore subject with him. He hoped it would be generally understood that he had given up Miss Dwight of his own choice. He did not want it to get out that he had been jilted.

"The whole world is welcome to hear it. I'd advertise it in the Times if it would do any good."

"I believe you are impudent," laughed the beauty.

"I know I'm impudent."

"I think it would do you good to take a long walk, Mr. Verinder."

"With Miss Seldon?" he wanted to know cautiously.

"Alone," she told him severely. "It would be a rest."

"A rest for me—or for you?"

The dimples flashed into her soft cheeks again. "For both of us, perhaps."

"Thanks. It's rather jolly here." He put his hands in his trousers pocket and leaned against a tree.

"Hope you'll enjoy it. I'm going to find Moya." Miss Seldon reeled up, put her rod against the tree, and sauntered off with lissom grace. Verinder tagged after her.

They followed the trail a stone's throw in silence.

"Miss Dwight's always going off by herself. Seems to me she's a bit off her feed," Verinder suggested.

Joyce was amused. For a man who wanted it understood that only one girl in the world mattered to him he still appeared to take a good deal of interest in Moya.

"Seems dreamy and—er—depressed. What!" he continued.

"Perhaps she is in love," Joyce let herself suggest wickedly.

"I've thought of that, but 'pon my word! I can't think of a man."

"Why not Mr. Verinder?"

His eyeglass ogled her to make sure he was not being made game of, but the lovely face was very innocent.

"Can't be," he demurred with conventional denial.

"Captain Kilmeny, then."

"Hardly. I don't think he's quite her style of man."

"Perhaps with his cousin, the highwayman."

"Good heavens, no!"

"There's Moya now—and there's a man with her," Joyce announced.

"By Gad, it's the highwayman!" Verinder gasped.

MONGOLIAN PRINCE OPPOSES INVASION

Chinese Army Refused Admission to Provinces of Exiled Mongol Prince

(By the Associated Press)

PEKING—In spite of the resentment felt by the Mongolians toward their Russian masters, it is doubtful whether they would welcome release at the hands of the Chinese in the opinion of Prince Na, one of the senior Mongolian nobles who with nine other princes has become an exile rather than submit to Russian rule.

Na is more than 6 years of age. He was one of 24 princes who ruled one of the four provinces of Outer Mongolia before Baron Ungern-Sternberg and his "red" troops took possession of the country some five years ago. At that time the Russian invaders and their following of young Mongols gave the Mongol princes their option of submitting or leaving their country. Ten out of 83 chose exile.

There have been various reports in circulation to the effect that the Chinese military authorities were considering plans for the recovery of Mongolia by means of an armed expedition. Interviewed on the subject Prince Na, who in spite of his long absence appears to have kept in touch with events and conditions in his own country expressed the opinion that such an effort would be ill advised. In the first place, he said, it is doubtful whether such an expedition could be successful, and in the second place it is an open question whether the Mongols themselves would welcome a Chinese army in their territory.

At present, the prince continued, the Living Buddha or Hutuktu, the head of the Mongol government, is a prisoner in his temple property in Urga. He is totally blind, but in spite of his infirmity he, like all the minor officials throughout the country, is kept under close surveillance by the Russian rulers. Individual Mongols are forced to pay much heavier taxes than under their native princes. The Russian forces are not proportionally large, but their authority extends pretty thoroughly over all the territory of Outer Mongolia.

Inner Mongolia remains loyal to the Chinese government, being designated as the Three Special Areas Jehol, Chahar and Suiyuan. Prince Na felt that the present regime in Outer Mongolia could not survive, but he does not anticipate a resumption of authority by the old princes and the Hutuktu. That day has passed, he said, in its place he hoped for an eventual reorganization by the Mongols under the protection of the Chinese government.

Izaak Walton's cottage at Shalford, near Stafford, England, has been restored and is now open to the public.

STURDY FOREIGNER FLOORS WILFUL CHINESE SOLDIER

(By the Associated Press)
PEKING—A Chinese soldier armed with a sack of copper coins beat up an Italian, an American and an Englishman on a recent Sunday morning in retaliation for having been denied the privilege of walking on the wall which bounds the Legation Quarter on the south. He had been told by the Chinese police that the wall was reserved for the use of foreigners.

A few days after his eviction the soldier strolled into Hatamen street, which bounds the Legation Quarter on the east, apparently determined to assert his rights. His first victims, the Italian and the American, escaped with slight injuries. Flushed with victory the soldier then remounted the forbidden wall prepared to challenge the first "foreign devil." An Englishman mounted the ramp, the soldier swung his sack of coins and the Englishman went down. He scrambled to his feet and landed a right to the jaw which floored the Chinese. An American marine came to the rescue and held the soldier until the Legation Quarter police arrived. The soldier was lodged in the Legation Quarter lock up where he has since been held pending assurances by the Chinese military authorities that he will be adequately punished. The Englishman broke his hand in the affair.

An application of cold water to the top of the heap, it is said, will produce sleep.

Our opinion is that just such exorcism from the brain of mental infants is responsible for a great many of the domestic immoralities of today. One of the greatest problems of America today is the farmer, and we know a number of farmers' wives who do not have mildewed brains. Although we are neither a farmer's wife nor a pantalooned co-ed, we know that the farther we advance in knowledge the better realize how little we can attain, and the more deeply we feel that God alone is great. It is not necessary that you be born on Mt. Parnassus, or that you drink dry the perian spring, to acquire intelligence and good breeding and be fit for a life of usefulness. The more necessary thing is that you apply with common sense the knowledge you do have as you get it.

NEW CONSCRIPTION TERMS FAVOR JAPAN'S ATHLETES

(By the Associated Press)
TOKIO—To encourage athletics and in the hope of raising Japan's national athletic status, the government has announced in the regulations governing conscription for military service. Hereafter young Japanese who go abroad for athletic competition will have their conscription terms postponed until their athletic tour is finished. This, it is claimed, will encourage international competition, as heretofore promising athletes have been prevented from going abroad by the imminence of their conscription terms.

The members of the Meiji University baseball team, which is touring the United States this spring and summer, the athletes who take part in the Olympic Games in Paris and the members of this year's Davis Cup team will be the first to benefit under the new ruling.

Another change permits Japanese emigrants living abroad to return to Japan temporarily without fear of conscription.

stipulated specifically the reservation of the right to control "the immigration of laborers" by law. It adds that when the new commercial treaty of 1911 was under negotiation this clause was eliminated at the instance of the Japanese government because of the existence of the gentlemen's agreement of 1907-1908 by which Japan undertook, on her motion, to restrict such emigration to the United States.

Reference also is made to memoranda exchanged between the Japanese embassy and the state department dated October 19, 1910, and Jan., 23, 1911, in which the state department acquiesced in the Japanese suggestion for elimination of the clause under discussion but with the stipulation that "the government of the United States does so with all necessary reserves and without prejudice to the inherent sovereign right of either country to limit and control immigration to own domains or possessions."

On February 8, 1911, the embassy replied in a memorandum which stated that "The imperial government concur in the understanding of the proposal relating to the question of immigration set forth in the above mentioned note on January 23, last."

Secretary Hughes notes points out that this correspondence constituted "a distinct understanding" between the two governments of the right of dealing with the question by legislative enactment "necessarily remains within the legislative power of this government to determine," a power which congress now has exercised.

The note advises the Japanese government that since the exclusion provision takes effect July 1, 1924, the Washington government must consider the government of Japan as released from any further obligation under the gentlemen's agreement as from that date. It concludes with the assertion that recognition of the right of each government to legislate in control of immigration "should not derogate in any degree from the mutual good will and cordial friendship which have always characterized the relations of the two countries."

The full text of the American communication follows:

"DEPARTMENT OF STATE
Washington, June 16, 1924.
His Excellency
Mr. Masanao Hanahara,
Japanese Ambassador,
"Excellency:

"I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note under date of May 31st containing a memorandum stating the position of the Japanese government with respect to the provision of section 13 (C) of the immigration act of 1924. I take pleasure in noting your reference to the friendliness and candor in which your communication has been made and you may be assured of the readiness of this government to consider in the same spirit the views you have set forth.

"At the time of the signing of the immigration bill the president issued a statement, a copy of which I had the privilege of handing to you, gladly recognizing the fact that the enactment of this provision does not imply any change in our sentiment of admiration and cordial friendship for the Japanese people, a sentiment which has had and will continue to have abundant manifestation. Permit me to state briefly the substance of the provision. Section 13 (C) related to the aliens ineligible to citizenship. It established certain exceptions, and to these classes the exclusion provision does not apply, to wit:

"Those who are not immigrants as defined in section 3 of the act, that is (1) a government official, his family attendants, servants and employees, (2) an alien visiting the United States temporarily as a tourist or temporarily for business or pleasure, (3) an alien lawfully admitted to the United States who later goes in transit from part of the United States to another foreign contiguous territory, (4) a bona fide alien seaman serving as such on a vessel arriving at a port of the United States and seeking to enter temporarily the United States solely in the pursuit of his calling as a seaman and (5) an alien entitled to enter the United States solely to carry on trade under and in pursuance of the provisions of a present existing treaty of commerce and navigation.

"Those who are admissible as non-quota immigrants under the provisions of sub-division (B), (D) or (E) of section four, that is (B) an immigrant previously lawfully admitted to the United States, who is returning from a temporary visit abroad; (D) an immigrant who continuously for at least two years immediately preceding the time of his application for admission to the United States has been and, who seeks to enter the United States solely for the purpose of carrying on the vocation of minister of any religious denomination or professor of a college, academy, seminary or university; and his wife and his unmarried children under 18 years of age, if accompanying or following to join him; or (E) an immigrant who is a bona fide student at least 15 years of age and who expects to enter the United States solely for the purpose of study at an accredited school, college, academy, seminary or university, particularly designated by him and approved by the secretary of labor which shall have agreed to report to the secretary of labor the termination of attendance of each immigrant student, and if any such institution of learning fails to make such report promptly the approval shall be withdrawn."

"Also, the wives or unmarried children under 18 years of age, of immigrants admissible under sub-division (D) of section four, above quoted.

"It will thus be observed that, taking these expectations into account, the provision in question does not differ greatly in its practical operation, or in the policy which it reflects, from the understanding

"Disgusted by Blocs," Missouri Representative quits Congress

By JOHN T. LEWING, JR.
WASHINGTON, June 18.—Henry L. Jost is through with congress. Not very often does a man who probably could have another term in either house or senate refuse it but Jost, who represents the Fifth District of Missouri in the house, has declared himself absolutely out of the race.

He is disgusted with the law-makers of the nation. He blames too many blocs and too little independence of action.

Jost, a Democrat who is serving his first term, said that he had no desire to longer remain a member of a body that was influenced only by expediency and whose action on measures showed an utter disregard of the public welfare.

"I will not file for re-nomination. Of that I became sure within thirty days after I took my seat, and time and intervening experience have served but to confirm men in that determination. I do not care to continue and sustain the attendant loss of companionship with my family and home friends as well, which would result from further inattention to my professional work. The present public distemper of the country must run its course. People will finally realize that embodied in the gentlemen's agreement, under which the Japanese government has co-operated with the government of the United States in preventing the emigration of Japanese laborers to this country. We fully and greatly appreciate the assistance which has thus been rendered by the Japanese government in the carrying out of this long established policy and it is not deemed to be necessary to refer to the economic consideration which have inspired it. Indeed, the appropriateness of that policy which has not evidenced any lack of esteem for the Japanese people, their character and achievements, has been confirmed, rather than questioned by the voluntary action of your government in aiding its execution.

"The point of substantial difference between the existing arrangement and the provision of the immigration act is that the latter has expressed, as the president has stated, 'the determination of the congress to exercise its prerogative in defining by legislation the control of immigration instead of leaving it to international arrangement.' It is not understood that this prerogative is called in question, but, rather, your government expressly recognizes that 'it lies within the inherent sovereign power of each state to limit and control immigration to its own domains' an authority which it is believed the Japanese government has not failed to exercise in its own discretion with respect to the admission of aliens and the conditions and location of their settlement within its borders. While the president would have preferred to continue the existing arrangement with the Japanese government and to have entered into negotiations for such modifications, as might seem to be desirable, this government does not feel that it is limited to such an international arrangement or that by virtue of the existing understanding, or of the negotiations which it has conducted in the past with the Japanese government it has in any sense lost or impaired the full liberty of action which it would otherwise have in this matter.

"On the contrary, that freedom with respect to the control of immigration, which is an essential element of sovereignty and entirely compatible with the friendly sentiments which animate our international relations, this government in the course of these negotiations always fully reserved.

"Thus in the treaty of commerce and navigation concluded with Japan in 1894 it was expressly stipulated in Article II:

It is, however, understood that the stipulations contained in this and the preceding article do not in any way affect the laws, ordinances or regulations with regard to trade, the immigration of laborers, police and public security which are in force or which may hereafter be enacted in either of the two countries."

"It is true that the time of the negotiation of the treaty of 1911 the Japanese government desired that the provision above stated should be eliminated and that this government acquiesced in that proposal in view of the fact that the Japanese government had in 1907-8, by means of the gentlemen's agreement, undertake such measures of restriction as it was anticipated would prove adequate to prevent any substantial increase in the number of Japanese laborers in the United States. In connection with the treaty revision of 1911, the Japanese government renewed this undertaking in the form of a declaration attached to the treaty. In acquiescing in this procedure, however, this government was careful to negative any intention to derogate from the full right to exercise in its discretion control over immigration. In view of the statements contained in your communication with respect to these negotiations I feel that I should refer to the exchange of views then had. You will recall that, in a memorandum of October 19, 1910, suggesting a basis for the treaty revision then in contemplation the Japanese embassy stated: 'x x x the measures which the imperial government has enforced for the past two and a half years in regulation of the question of immigration of laborers to the United States, have, it is believed, proved entirely satisfactory and far more effective than any prohibition of immigration would have been. Those measures of restraint were undertaken voluntarily, in order to prevent any dispute or issue between the two countries on the subject of labor immigration, and will be continued, it may be added, so long as the condition of things calls for such continuation.

"Accordingly, having in view the actual situation, the imperial government are convinced that the reservation in question is not only necessary, but that it is an engagement which, if continued, is more liable to give rise to misunderstandings than to remove differences. In any case it is a stipulation which, not unnaturally, is distasteful to national sensibilities. In these circumstances the imperial government desires in the new treaty to suppress entirely the reservation above mentioned, and to leave in words as well as in fact, the question to which it relates, for friendly adjustment between the two governments independently of any conventional stipulations on the subject. In expressing that desire they are not unmindful of the difficulties under which the United States labour in the matter of immigration and they will accordingly, if so desired, be willing to make the proposed treaty terminable at any time upon six months' notice.

"The Japanese embassy is satisfied that in the presence of such a termination clause the contracting states would actually enjoy greater liberty of action so far as immigration is concerned, than under the existing reservation on the subject. Replying to these suggestions the department of state, declared in its memorandum sent to the Japanese ambassador on January 23, 1911, that it was prepared to enter into negotiations for a new treaty of commerce and navigation on the following basis:

"The department of state understands, and proceeds upon the understanding, that the proposal of the Japanese government made in the above mentioned memorandum is that the clause relating to immigration is the existing treaty be omitted for the reason that the limitation and control which the imperial Japanese government has enforced for the past two and one-half years in regulation of immigration of laborers to the United States and which the two governments have recognized as a proper measure of adjustment under all the circumstances, are to be continued with equal effectiveness during the life of the new treaty, the two governments when necessary cooperating to this end; the treaty to be made terminable upon six months' notice.

"It is further understood that the Japanese government will at the time of signature of the treaty make formal declaration to the above effect, which may in the discretion of the government of the United States be made public.

"In accepting the proposal as a basis for the settlement of the question of immigration between the two countries, the government of the United States does so with all necessary reserves and without prejudice to the inherent sovereign right of either country to limit and control immigration to its own domains or possessions."

"On February 8, 1911, in a memorandum informing the department of state of the readiness of the Japanese government to enter upon the negotiations which had been suggested by the embassy and to which the department had assented subject to the reservation above quoted, the Japanese embassy stated that 'the imperial government concur in the understanding of the proposal relating to the question of immigration set forth in the above mentioned note of January 23 last.'

"It was thus with the distinct understanding that it was without prejudice to the inherent sovereign right of either country to limit or control immigration to its own domains or possessions that the treaty of 1911 was concluded. While this government acceded to the arrangement by which Japan undertook to enforce measures designed to obviate the necessity of a statutory enactment, the advisability of such an enactment necessarily remained within the legislative power of this government to determine. As this power has now been exercised by congress in the enactment of the provision in question, this legislative action is mandatory upon the executive branch of the government and allows no latitude for the exercise of executive discretion as to the carrying out of the legislative will expressed in the statute.

"It is provided in the immigration act that the provision of section 13 (C), to which you have referred, shall take effect on July

BULGAR TOBACCO GROWERS UNITE

Co-operation Steps Taken by After Long Years of Privation

(By the Associated Press)
STANIMAKA, Bulgaria.—Starting five years ago with a collective capital of about $12 a cooperative society of tobacco growers of this district has been so phenomenally successful that it is starting a nation-wide cooperative campaign that is attracting much attention.

No matter how large his stock holding, a member has but one vote. The management of the plantations and factories is elective by direct vote and the cooperative idea has been carried into all phases of the life of its members.

It is shown by the annual report just issued that the society controls four-fifths of the business of this town. It extends to its members physical, educational and moral help. Its own physicians visit the sick members, they are taken to society hospitals in society ambulances. It maintains a large orchestra which gives semi-weekly concerts in its own hall. It has its own legal advisers and its own court for disputes between members.

When a deterioration in the quantity or quality of a co-operator's tobacco crop is observed, they send the society chemist to analyze soil and crop and determine the cause of the decline.

Not only does the society refuse to deal with non-cooperative producers of tobacco, but it insists upon employing co-operators as carpenters, masons, producers of building materials and of machinery.

One of the results is a remarkable improvement in the morals of the town. Drunkenness is practically unknown, although Stanimaka is the center of a wine industry, also co-operative in its operation.

The city government is almost completely controlled by co-operators.

JUDGE AND MRS. L. C. LINDSEY IN OREGON

Judge L. C. Lindsey in subscribing for the Weekly News states that he and Mrs. Lindsey are now in Ontario, Oregon, where they went for the benefit of Mrs. Lindsey's health.

Mr. Lindsey is not very favorably impressed with that country as a place in which to live, aside from its being an extremely healthy place. He says it depends altogether on irrigation. Most of it is in orchard or alfalfa, he says, and during the war, boom suckers paid as high as $600 per acre for tracts only to lose everything when the slump came.

While manufacturers endeavored to adjust themselves to the situation by quoting prices in dollars or pounds, and wholesalers just as rapidly followed suit, numerous new laws and divers regulations prevented the retailers from joining this procession of inflating prices and they were rigidly bound to a narrow margin of profits.

The association officials contend that for the retail trade of the country, 1923 was worse than any period during the war. With the stabilization of the rentenmark, however, retailers this year expect that business generally will get back to a pre-war basis.

Of decided influence in the business of 1923 were the steady decline of the mark and the occupation of the Ruhr, which upset conditions generally.

HUNGRY SEALS TREATEN LOSS TO SALMON FISHERS

(By the Associated Press)
VANCOUVER, B. C.; June 18.—Destruction of one-sixth to one-third of the average spring salmon pack in the Fraser river by hair seals, has caused local fishermen to fear the fish will become extinct and a large revenue be lost.

So clever are the seals that it is a race between them and the fishermen every time a bobbing cork on the net shows that a salmon has struck it. The seal generally wins. Wolf-like, a seal goes for the throat of a fish, and usually a head is all that is left in the net. Fishermen have tried spreading a "blind" net, to protect the actual fishing net, but the seals, evidently learning the trick, drive the salmon into the net to make capture easier.

Not only do seals live on salmon but when their hunger is appeased they kill for sport, tossing the fish out of the water as a cat plays with a mouse. A seal can throw a 30-pound salmon clear of the water, the fishermen declare.
